I want to make a device that solves a problem for the 25% of the population which is not as skilled as the rest of the people. I have no idea about hardware development. I tried to search it on google but I don't get any fruitful result. This is my problem: I want my device to be able to reverse the functionality of the keyboard of a "normal" keyboard. The device should be placed above the keyboard as to be able to reverse the function. For some reason I want my users to be able to replace it with a normal keyboard. Is this solution a bad one? Or should I rather look for something else? A: This is a really great idea but I think the answer to your question is - it depends. First of all, I agree with your conclusion that 25% of the population is not as skilled, let's label that group as "the 25%". If you decide to go this way, I think you should also decide whether or not the 25% is going to be compensated for their time and/or effort. As you may 82138339de
