I didn't test that last problem, but the first one I want to cover briefly because while it doesn't result in errors, it does mess up the environment. If you have a lot of installed software on an older Mac, there is the possibility that the installation process will keep or create defaults. One way to combat this is to perform a factory reset of the Mac, in theory rebooting everything back to a state where you only have the OS X on the system. Unfortunately, it took a while to do and wanted to wait until the evening to get back here. Dec 23, 2019 . 0. 0. 0. 2. 3da54e8ca3
