The largest single-day payday lending use to date in the United States was reported Tuesday in Gallup's State of the Union 2014 summary. According to Gallup's figures, around 143,000 Americans reported using payday loans during the week of Oct. 30, 2013. That's up 16% from the year before. Gallup's poll also saw an uptick in "ultra-short" credit, which is a payday loan in a two-week timeframe. Ultra-short credit use increased by around 50% in the last 12 months, and up by about 100% in the last year. Each of these reports seems to show that either American consumers are borrowing more or there are just more payday lenders open for business. And there are good reasons why some are open. "You can get as many as 16 loans in one day," said Brian Murphy, editor of the Utah-based Cash & Loans. "If you get a new job you can get the money and your old boss can cash it. If you get a bad check, you can get the money and not have to wait till you get paid. And it's up to $500, which is pretty good." Payday loans are supposed to be offered by retailers who are not licensed to make payday loans. So what business is Murphy talking about? "We do a lot of business with some of the bigger retailers in their own stores. When they process a check or do an automatic teller machine transaction, they give us the name of the customer and we give them the money. So if you have a check come in for $1000, you can get $1000 from us for that person," said Murphy. And what if the customer forgets to pay the loan back, or defaults on the loan? "Nobody takes the title to the car. They just write it off," said Murphy. Payday loans are not to be confused with unsecured credit cards, student loans, or car loans, which are all considered "ultra-short" by the Federal Reserve. The payday loan industry has come under fire by anti-poverty and pro-consumer groups who claim that many people who take these loans cannot afford to pay them back. On the other hand, payday loans help consumers who are out of work get a loan to buy groceries and pay their rent. They also say the interest rates in the industry are modest. "The interest rate is based on how much

Raise your hand if you ever wished you knew more about the back story to your projects. Are you the kind of entrepreneur who lives and breathes business planning? Or the rest of us? It's easy to fall into the trap of not knowing the ins and outs of your business – who you should be pitching, what (if anything) you should be researching. This is something I could never have contemplated back when I used to work in an office every day. How (and how much) did I even have to make decisions? The reality is, we live in a competitive world, and if you're not careful, you could lose an opportunity and a customer without ever knowing it. This is where I come in. My challenge to you is to check out my free series to learn how to stay on top of your business and maintain a competitive edge. You can thank me later. ? Have you ever had a project that is running at 100% or even over capacity? No you say? But your in-house Chief Financial Officer is working flat out to come up with a plan to balance their costs and the level of service they're delivering?[Cervical poliosis. Clinical and histological study of a case]. Cervical poliosis is a rare disorder that has been described in the literature as both a traction and static disorder. A retrospective clinical and histological study of a 22 year old woman affected by cervical poliosis is reported. The etiology and pathogenesis of the disease remain uncertain. We discuss the clinical features and the anatomopathological findings. We hypothesize an idiopathic embryological pathogenesis.Sunday, July 19, 2016 H.S. Chemistry Let's face it, we live in a big ol' world. We are taught to be a part of it. We have to navigate it. And so with that mind set, let's talk about science! My name is Alyssa and I am currently a fifth-grader at Kilmer Middle School. I'm currently in AP Chemistry. I didn't do too bad in middle school. Chemistry is much harder than it looks. It's pretty cool, but it's also pretty hard. This year, I'm taking AP Chemistry with Kristi. She's a really nice person. She's one of those teachers who is super nice, which makes chemistry a lot easier. I like having a hard teacher because I
