AutoCAD MEP Crack is one of the most popular 3D modeling software, which is used by the architects and other professional designers. In this post, we are providing you the AutoCAD MEP 2015 new version with its crack.Q: Kendo UI on ASP.NET MVC4 - load data from web to local database The situation is as follows - I have an MVC4 application running on the web. This application is used to display some data. This data comes from a non-web application (that we have no control over). I want to attach it to my MVC4 app and use it locally - on my development machine. All the data comes from a database - we don't have a front end yet. Right now I am using Kendo's MVC4 example. I have a kendo grid, that I have populated with mock data in my controller. If I put a breakpoint in the Controller code, it is never hit. Is it possible to map the data to my local database instead of using a mock database? I am aware that I could use Entity Framework, but I want to keep the mock data in my database for now. Thanks. A: This link was helpful. I used this code in my Controller: var gridData = from dbSet in db.Set<T> select dbSet; return Json(gridData, JsonRequestBehavior.AllowGet); and this code in my View: @model System.Collections.Generic.IEnumerable<T> @ViewBag.Title = "Simple"; } Simple @Html.Kendo().Grid().Name("grid").Columns(columns => { columns.Bound(e => e.Id).Hidden(true); columns.Bound(e => e.Code); columns.Bound(e => e.Description); }) .
